Garden Chatter

By LOBING BIGELOW

The Catalina ironwood (Lyothamhus floribundus), which almost became the official city of Torrance tree at one time, is an interesting plant and was formerly endemic to the Southern California Channel Islands. A wonderful specimen is located at the Santa Barbara Botanical Gardens which you should see if you are ever up that way. Several smaller specimens, not shaped up too nice, however, may be seen in a parkway planting on Vista del Parque, Hollywood Riviera section of Torrance. Look for an interesting example in front No. 137 on that street.

The Catalina ironwood is an unpredictable tree in its growth habits for there doesn't seem to be any two growing alike, and should the homeowner wish for a straight and tall tree, considerable pruning will be necessary. It thrives in our mild and temperate coastal climate for it does not like extremes of heat or cold.

The bark is reddish brown in color, rough and peeling. In older trees it weathers to a silvery gray. The branches, if untrained, shoot twisted and crooked in many directions. The leaves are very interesting and form an interesting contrast to the reddish trunk. They are deep green in color and often are seen in two types upon the tree—bladelike fernlike. Tiny white flowers appear in the early summer followed by a woody capsule. The tree is relatively free from all types of pests and no special attention is needed if normal growth is desired, no special feeding is required, it tolerates seacoast condition, its growth is moderate. The foliage keeps a long time when cut and used in flower arrangements.

$1000 Shaved From Cost of Parade Float

A full $1000 was shaved from the cost of Torrance's Tournament of Roses Float by the announcement that members of the City's Garden and Women's Clubs were volunteering to decorate the entry. Chamber officials announced the appointment of Mrs. Victor E. Benstead as decoration chairman for the project.

"Almost every Garden and Women's organization has asked to help," said Chairman George Bradford, who added that any adult Torrance resident could help if they so desired. Residents are urged to call the Chamber Office to be listed as volunteers. The cost of the float was $5500 but now will be $4500 said Bradford. Mrs. Benstead said her committee would meet with Float Designer, Mrs. Isabella Coleman, on Tuesday, Dec. 17th in Pasadena.
